Detectives Investigate Another Incident Involving the Earl's Home

AIM AT HER AUTO

Duchess of Kent Said To Be "Very Upset" Over The Affair

By James E. Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, June 6.—(INS)—With an elderly Australian under arrest and facing charges of using a firearm with intent to commit bodily harm on the Duchess of Kent, Scotland Yard detectives today investigated another, but probably unrelated incident, involving the home of the Earl of Harewood and the Princess Royal.

About the same time a shot was fired at the Duchess of Kent's limousine last night, servants found a small hole in the dining room window at the Harewood residence.

Police believed the window was broken by a bullet, which they thought may have been fired by a member of the Irish Republican Army, the illegal anti-British organization connected with the recent wave of bombings in this country.

The Earl and the Princess Royal, who is the only sister of King George VI., already had retired when the hole was found in the window.

The attempt on the Duchess of Kent, wife of the King's youngest brother, may have been in protest against the Duke's appointment as Governor General of Australia, which he was due to take in November. The man under arrest, it was understood, arrived here about three weeks ago from Australia.

Unaware that a bullet was aimed at her, the Duchess of Kent and the Earl and Countess of Portarlington went to an American movie in the Haymarket.

Later, the Duchess, who was described as "very upset" said she heard the crack, but thought it was her car backfiring.

Two policemen on guard in Belgrave Square, fashionable district where the Duke and Duchess live, sprang on the alleged gunman and, after a short struggle, took him to a nearby police station.

Afterwards a saved-off shot-gun was found, with one cartridge fired, near the Kent home.

The Duke had gone out on another engagement just after dinner, but he was informed at once of the shooting.

Today a special guard of three policemen was stationed outside the house, and all persons who approached were halted.

U. S. ARMY BEGINS TO BUILD UP AIR STRENGTH

Aviation Experts Predict U. S. Will Have Finest Air Force in World

PLAN FOR 2-YEAR DRIVE

(Note: The U. S. Army is undertaking a monumental task. In the short space of two years, it plans to increase its air force to 6,000 planes, train pilots to fly them, build barracks for the pilots, provide bases to house and service the planes, and accomplish the countless other jobs incidental to such a program.

When the work is completed, Uncle Sam will have an air armada equal to any in a feverish-rearming world.

Herewith is the first in a series of six articles telling how this miracle of construction and organization will be accomplished, and why this country will be "top dog" in the air in late 1941.—INS.)

A Family Reunited

(By "The Stroller")
There was much ado in the vicinity of the railroad station a few days ago, when a mother robin was heard, flitting about with great chirping, worrying over her nest of young.

And the young were being fed bread crumbs at about that time, by little "Billy," who lives nearby. The small lad had the nest in his hands, and several little bird mouths opened wide for the crumbs of bread.

A spectator induced "Billy" to climb the tree to replace the nest in its rightful place, but upon the spectator's preparing to climb up with the nest to hand it to the child, he decided he might get his clean shirt dirty. Whereupon the nest with its live cargo was carefully placed in a paper bag, a string tied tightly about the top, and the ball at the other end thrown to the child who had gone aloft. The bag went up and up, elevator-fashion, and the mother bird was soon reunited with her young.

The Per Capita Tax is Set at $3, the Same As It Was During 1938

BUDGET IS ADOPTED

MORRISVILLE, June 6.—Adoption of its budget and setting the tax rate occupied the attention of the Board of Education recently. The tax is the same as last year, 25 mills on real estate and $3 per capita.

The budget totals $117,690 and provides $6,370 for general control, which includes the salary of secretary and treasurer, tax collector, printing, postage and office expenses. Under instruction, $70,925 is provided, which is the largest item. This includes teachers' salaries, text books, supplies, etc.

The auxiliary agencies, including compulsory attendance, medical inspection, lectures, etc., calls for $925; $10,395 will be used for operation of buildings, such as janitors' salaries, fuel, light, plumbing and supplies. The maintenance of grounds lists $1,500. The fixed charges are $2,875, for State retirement, fire and compensation insurance. The debt service, providing for reducing of bonded indebtedness and interest, is $21,900, while capital outlay, covering improvement of the grounds, architectural services, etc., is budgeted at $2,700.

Total estimated receipts include real estate taxes, $62,134; per capita taxes, $8,859; delinquent taxes, $8,900; State appropriation, $27,000; tuition, $1,800, and temporary loan in anticipation of delinquent taxes, $9,000.

The board gave the Morrisville Fire Department, both Union and Capitol View Companies, permission to use the high school auditorium in connection with the Bucks County Firemen's Association convention and parade here June 9 and 10.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in the Courier.

Those present expressed the opinion that if the efforts of the Bucks County Association are confined entirely to planning and zoning, much good can be accomplished, but if the activities are spread out, no progress will be made with the main objective.

SCHOOL BOARD VOTES TO OPEN NEW DEPARTMENT

Home Economics Was Closed Several Years Ago Because of Lack of Finances

DISCUSS SCHOOL AFFAIR

The Bristol school board last night voted to open a Home Economics Department next year. It is to be taught beginning with the eighth grade. The schools a number of years ago had a Home Economics Department but it was discontinued several years ago because of financial conditions.

The Board last night discussed obtaining a successor to Coach Juenger who tendered his resignation. It was decided to engage an all-around coach at a salary of $1500. The Board has a large number of applications.

Mr. Gondos of Gondos and Gondos met with the Board and discussed one or two disputes concerning the completion of contract details of the recent high school addition.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property Committee, reported that some painting work at the high school addition is to be done over because it was not in accordance with specifications. Mr. Brady also stated that the Property Committee would like to do considerable repair work at the high school building during the summer months and that the committee would need about $1,000 additional to do this work.

Mrs. Aaa Fabian, school committee, reported having visited the intermediate grades at the high school building and attending the baccalaureate exercises.

Mrs. Horace N. Davis, school committee, stated that she had visited the high school and the grades at Bath street and Jefferson avenue buildings.

Several of the directors stated that the baccalaureate exercises on Sunday had been very impressive and that the entire program was excellent. The Board voted to send a letter of appreciation to the Rev. Boswell thanking him for the excellent manner in which the service was conducted.

Mr. Juenger was granted permission to leave school on the last Wednesday of the term as his classes would then be thorough and this will afford him an opportunity to take a summer position as counselor at Treasure Island Scout Camp.

A leave of absence was granted Miss Elizabeth Evans for the first semester of next year during which time she will take advantage of a scholarship at the Columbia University, to obtain a master's degree.

The members of the Board highly commented upon the very excellent musical given by the Rutgers musical organizations. Some said that they thought this should be made an annual affair.

The Board ordered that the gymnasium be cleaned and repaired.

The Board voted to extend the use of the high school field to the July

Pilot Rescued at Sea

Chatham, Mass., June 6.—Rescue at sea of Cheston Eshelman, youthful student pilot, about 300 miles due East of Boston, after his plane had settled on the surface of the Atlantic, and then plunged beneath the waves, was reported today by the trawler "Villanova."

The rescue was reported through Radiomarine coastal station at Chatham, which earlier had told of the plane circling the trawler "Storm," and seeking directions to the nearest point of land.

Radiomarine reported receipt of the following message at 7.50 a. m. (E. S. T.) "Plane came down in 39 fathoms near trawler 'Villanova'."

"Villanova" has all details, and took man off plane.

"Trawler 'Triton' is now dragging, trying to haul up sunken plane." Origin of message was not stated, but it was believed to have come from either the Villanova, the Triton or Storm.

Camden, N. J., June 6.—Cheston Eshelman, 25-year-old student pilot, who apparently set out on a trans-Atlantic flight in a stolen plane after 10 hours of flying experience, was lucky to have escaped with his life today. That was the reaction of veteran airmen at Central Airport, Camden, from which the youthful resident of Carlisle, Pa., hopped off last night in a single motor monoplane owned by the Walz Flying School.

Informed of markings on the monoplane which crashed into the sea 300 miles due East of Boston this morning, Edward Walz, operator of the flying school at Central Airport, declared: "There can be no doubt about it. That's our ship." Walz termed Eshelman's exploit a "fool-hardy stunt," but was unprepared to say what action would be taken against the youth at present.

The monoplane, which sank after landing on the sea near a trawler which rescued the student pilot, was purchased for $2,600 a month ago, by the flying school. When Eshelman took it into the air on a $9 an hour solo flight, it carried only enough fuel for 175 miles flying. Since the spot where he was picked up is approximately 500 miles from Camden officials are wondering where he re-fueled.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Helping Coerce Congress

Washington, June 5. MOST thoughtful men with any political knowledge or experience will agree that among the things that make it most difficult for our form of government to function efficiently are the various organized groups which exert pressure upon Congress in favor of the special interests they represent.

FORMED into country-wide associations, these pressure groups maintain elaborate and expensive lobbies in Washington which bear down on members of Congress to support the particular legislation to which they are committed. Aside from the merits of the measures they advocate, the weapons they use make their advocacy offensive and dangerous. Chief among these weapons is the political club which supposed control of a large block of voters in districts and States enables them to swing over the heads of members of Congress.

THEIR appeal is not to the reason, but to the fears, of the legislator. He is threatened with political annihilation if he refuses his vote, promised support if he delivers. Such is the nature of our politics that it is extremely hard for a man who wants to hold his seat in House or Senate to ignore the possible consequences of offending any considerable group of voters. There are always opponents eager to capitalize his antagonisms. The result is that members of Congress, under threats, open or implied, often support proposals which, if freed from apprehension, they would vigorously denounce.

EVERYBODY in politics knows this to be true. It is one of the worst growths of our political

Bristol Man Is Charged With Parole Violation

DOYLESTOWN, June 6.—Angelo Deliso, 34, 1119 Wood street, Bristol, was given a hearing before Judge Calvin S. Boyer, here, yesterday, on a charge of violating a parole. Deliso had been placed on probation so he might support his wife and children, after being sentenced February 16th on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Deliso said he could not write and that his wife wrote the card telling of the lower salary.

Judge Boyer said to the defendant: "Don't you know you are playing with fire in violating your parole?" Deliso was ordered to refund the money.

His sentence would have expired on June 14th. Parole was granted with the stipulation that he pay the balance of costs of prosecution. GRADUATE THOUGHTS

On graduation day in schools and colleges, it was once customary, when the departing seniors said their final words of farewell, to deliver orations and essays in which they expressed the most noble purposes. "Not for ourselves alone," was one favorite motto adopted by many graduating classes. They expressed generous and unselfish hopes of rendering service to the world.

Also they had ideas as to how the world could be reformed. They took the hoary old sinner "Humanity" and told him how he could change his ways, and attain happiness.

That type of oration was frequently laughed at. You don't so often hear it now. The modern youth is usually anxious to seem sophisticated. He wants to be considered familiar with the ways of the world, and does not usually like to seem too much shocked by existing conditions. He commonly proposes to take the world about as he finds it, and he has little hope of changing it.

A great deal can be said in favor of the unselfish and intelligent thoughts that have been presented in countless graduating essays of the older type referred to. The graduate was laughed at for telling the world how it could mend its ways, but usually what he said was perfectly true. If the world would take the counsels of its educated people, and act in a sensible manner, it would be infinitely happier.

The graduates of today do not so often tell the world what to do. They have learned that it does not do much good. However, they are a very bright type of people, and if given half a chance will show the world many things it thought impossible. The community welcomes them. Let us do everything possible to give them a chance to make good.

CHILDREN'S READING

The reason for the advice of William Lyon Phelps to let children "read a lot of trash, if it is exciting," is evident enough. Reading, even if of trash, is the only way to inculcate the reading habit. Later, said the Yale scholar and critic, children can be "led to read better books."

Not so evident is the reason for the Phelps conclusion that "exciting trash" is better than other trash for forming the reading habit. Presumably he feels that sentimental trash is more apt to leave lasting marks on the juvenile consciousness. Reading can produce a distorted sense of values, unreal ideas of life. Phelps may believe that adventure and detective fiction, being so obvious, unreal, is for that reason less dangerous to the young than the kind which purports to be like everyday life but isn't.

If so, his view is the reverse of the one prevailing a few years ago when Nick Carter and the like were prescribed reading and sentimentalism prescribed. We wish we knew which was right, though it is our observation that children mostly go to read what they want to anyway. We do agree with Phelps that, particularly in this day of too much effortless oral and visual entertainment, inculcating the reading habit is the main thing.

In America a vote of confidence is a director's vote to borrow money and extend the plant.

One never heard of a Marathon quadrille. In a square dance this was no partner to lean on.

system, dating back many years. Among the larger lobbies there is now a considerable degree of co-operation. For example, the farm lobby will support a labor measure in which it has no interest because it wants support from the labor lobby for its own bill. It is easier for a President to resist this kind of pressure than for the individual member in a close State or district, because the former's appeal is to the nation as a whole and he cannot be coerced by district or State. That makes the present unprecedented situation all the more discouraging.

—O—
The simple fact is that this Administration is the first in history the heads of which actively encourage, endorse and promote these organized minorities whose sole aim is to coerce Congress. Instead of encouraging it to resist, the Roosevelt Administration encourages the bullying groups which threaten it. The amazing exhibition of the Government co-operating in its own coercion afforded by the Administration support of the Workers' Alliance has already been commented upon here. Mrs. Roosevelt is to be one of the speakers this week at a meeting of this organization, the primary purpose of which is to force Congress to provide more money for WPA workers.

—O—
The active support of the Alliance by the Administration is an indefensible thing which members of Congress who have to submit to the bullying of its leaders have every reason to resent. However, an equally extraordinary incident has just been disclosed by the Scripps-Howard papers, which point out that county farm agents of the AAA in Alabama are appealing to farmers to join the American Farm Bureau Federation in order "to insure continuation of AAA payments." "There is," says a letter from one county agent sent out to farmers in franked envelopes of the Department of Agriculture, "only one way to continue to receive these payments; it is through membership in an organization which is strong enough to tell Congress what you want. The AFBF is the largest farm organization in the world, and only through it have you been able to receive these payments."

—O—
HERE is the Administration, through its accredited agent, soliciting membership in a lobbying organization the purpose of which is to get more money from the Government. It was this organization which brought pressure on Congress for the $400,000,000 parity payments, put into the farm bill a few weeks ago. The President had not recommended these increases. He and the AAA were supposed to be against them. Various columnists and others assailed the Senate for passing the increase and insist that as a result the economy bloc has collapsed. It is not true that it has collapsed, although it is true it could have made a better fight to prevent this raid on the Treasury.

—O—
NEVERTHELESS, what is to be said of a President who publicly deprecates this action but permits his own Administration agents actively to solicit membership in the organization which forced it? With no disposition to excuse the Senate for yielding to pressure, it does seem that those who so indignantly leaped upon the economy bloc might find something to say about this utterly astonishing Administration encouragement of the pressure groups which make economy

CHAPTER XVIII

Sunday breakfast was late as usual, for there was no getting Ed and Bee up before 11.

"I should think you might consider me, just on this one day!" Mrs. Wilson cried, but it didn't do any good, they wouldn't get up. Eddie had worked late, and Bee and Ritchie Huntsman had gone on to a dance, though Bee was half dead from the worry and strain of her unaccustomed entertaining, and Ritchie had made things worse by suggesting that they take Marie, too.

"You're awfully nice, but I believe I'd rather stay home and wait for Edward," Marie had said, but she couldn't resist smiling up at Ritchie gratefully, because it WAS nice of him. Ordinarily Bee wouldn't have noticed, but tonight her feet hurt, and she'd spent most of next month's salary entertaining Marie, without giving her a half interest in her boy friend. So one or two sharp words were said, and the glow of the afternoon was gone.

Mr. Wilson had been up, putting around for hours, before the others came down. He had been used to early hours all his life, and couldn't sleep late just because it was Sunday.

They had breakfast in the kitchen because the dining-room table had been set the night before.

"Take your time—I've got almost everything done," Mrs. Wilson kept telling them, but she had the plates off the table before even Edward could ask for a second helping.

"Bee, you might just wash up these few dishes. . . . Claude, I've asked you, and ASKED you, will you sharpen the carver, and Eddie, if you'd just rake up the lawn—all those leaves look so untidy, and you never see any dead leaves around Ada's place—"

Even on this day of days, with time short, and the dinner set for 12 o'clock she couldn't bring herself to ask Marie to do anything. She could ask favors of her own—not a stranger.

"You can help rake, honey," Edward said. So they worked and laughed out in the mild March wind, while the rest of the family got in each other's way inside. At the last moment there was a great scramble to dress, so that someone would be ready to answer the doorbell, but at 10 minutes to 2 everything was finished. The house was spotless, the long white-covered table gleamed with the glass and silver—the salads were all ready to serve.

The Hortons came first. Aunt Jessie, a little younger, and a little more dashing than Mrs. Wilson, but comically like her, even to the old-fashioned backcomb. Uncle Bert, short and fat and jovial.

"Well, Jessie," Mrs. Wilson said. "Well, Mattie."

They embraced awkwardly.

"Lo, Claude! Lo, Edward! What's this I hear about you bringing home a . . . and this is the bride! Well, well, well! Does Uncle Bert get a kiss?"

He was taking it, a little moistly and exuberantly, when the Lemnkes arrived.

Sister Ada had none of her brother Bert's joviality. She was a short, fat woman, with an air of expecting the worst at any moment. Husband Clem followed her diffidently. The two boys, Elwin and Irwin, disdainful 14 and 16, offered limp hands to their elders, stood resignedly, waiting for dinner.

"Well, if you're all ready, dinner is," Mrs. Wilson panted.

Mr. Wilson made his little joke, "Since it's the butler's day off, and none of you folks care for caviar, why we'll just start with our soup!"

Then Uncle Bert had his joke. "Too bad nobody liked your soup, Mattie!"

Bee brought the salad on a tray. Then the ham, all decorated with pineapple slices and cloves.

After the exclamations over its beauty, and a few more jokes on the part of Pop and Aunt Bert, nobody said much. They settled down, stolidly, to eat.

"Best ham you ever baked, Mom!" Edward told his mother. "Marie and I are mighty flattered at all this honor!"

"Hear, hear!" Uncle Bert cried. Marie watched Aunt Ada moodily buttering a biscuit. She thought: I wonder if anybody's really enjoying this? I wonder if it will really cost Edward his job?

It wasn't the Sunday off that cost Edward the job. It was a silly little argument about service.

Edward was testing tires for Press Hackett, who had stopped by for two gallons of gas, and a little conversation. Some of the boys were planning a deep sea fishing trip a week from Sunday; Albert White had the boat reserved. They'd leave around 7 and go out to the Farallones, and then finish up with one of those good old fish steaks, and Stub Bue's uncle, the brewer, was going to donate the beer.

Naturally it couldn't be dismissed in a minute. Edward had to explain why he couldn't come, and then Press had to ask a few civil questions about Marie, reminding him that hardly anyone had even set eyes on her yet.

And just because some impatient woman drove off without waiting for Edward to come to her, the boss got mad.

There were angry words. One thing led to another.

"You used to be a good worker, Ed, but you're no good now."

"No? Why do you keep me on? Just for the customers I bring in?"

"Two gallons. A little water, and half an hour's talk. That's the kind of customers?"

"How about Mrs. Shiller and her gas-eating, oil-burning 12 cylinder?"

"She always came here."

"She did not! She started coming when I began working! She comes to see me!"

"If you'd get over that swell-head, Wilson, and do a little work around here I'd keep you on. I know you need the job, but darned if I'm going to put up with any more of your smart-ale monkey business, talking back to me in my own station."

Edward told him what he could do. The job didn't amount to a row of beans anyway.

But he knew that his mother, who had hollered her head off about the Sunday work and night work in the first place, would holler louder when she found that he'd given it up. He decided not to mention it for a few days. Take a few days and catch up with some of his personal business. Press was right, he hadn't been anywhere, hadn't seen a soul since he got back.

Things were strained at home, anyway. Bee, for all her unexpected championing of Marie, wouldn't give him any peace about the board. To do her credit, she did choose moments when Marie was out of the house, but it made him mad just the same.

"I don't expect you to pay double what I pay," she said, "but I think you ought to pay as much. While you were out of work I kept quiet, I just paid and paid and paid. Now that you're working, and have brought home a wife, I can't see any good reason why you don't at least pay for one. I get a good salary, yes—but I work hard for it, and I shouldn't have to do everything. That tea I gave—"

Edward groaned, but there was no stopping her when she got wound up. "That tea I gave cost me almost $35, and I had to get a new dress for it, too!"

"That, too, was on my account?" Edward suggested.

"It was on Marie's account. Eddie, I'm trying not to get mad at you, but you haven't done a single thing for Marie since you married her. Think how it LOOKS! Even poor Mom did something—having the family—"

"Oh, my Lord!" Ed groaned.

4th Celebration Committee should its use be desired.

Warren P. Snyder, superintendent, exhibited a number of graphs showing results of reading tests given in grades one to three for the school term 1937-1938 and the school term 1938-1939. Another report was submitted by the Guidance Councilors of the high school which was very satisfactory.

The Board discussed a number of proposed changes for the new term. Some teachers will be changed from one building to another and two rooms at Bath street will probably be closed. There are indications of small enrollments in the lower grades but the higher grades will be filled.

Miss Karlson was named a teacher at a salary of $1000.

A letter was received from the P. O. S. of A., expressing its approval of the Board's action in objecting to the location of retail liquor or beer dispensing places within 300 feet of any public school building.

ROHM & HAAS NINE WINS BY ONE RUN

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Schedule for tonight
GRUNDY'S at HALL ALUMINUM
(Leedom's field)
Umpire, Kervick; scorer, Tomlinson.
Six runs in the fifth frame gave the Rohm and Haas nine a close triumph over the Grundy's team last evening on the latter's field. Final score was 7-6.

Ralph Narcisi who pitched good ball for four cantoes suddenly went to pieces in the fifth and before VanLenten was called in three runs were in and the sacks loaded. Locke completed the scoring by socking a triple to clean the sacks.

There was quite a bit of bludgeoning in the high-scoring frame. Johnny Dick had a homer while Gallagher and Locke socked triples. Three batters were issued passes and another was marked with a pitched ball.

Grundy's had one good inning in scoring, the fourth. In this period, they found themselves and rocked Howie Black for a total of five tallies. DiTanna had a three-bagger and Ithig a double to help this cause.

It was announced last night that the Diamond-Hall Aluminum game scheduled to be played on Leedom's field tomorrow night has been shifted to the Rohm and Haas diamond at Maple Beach.

ODD FELLOWS TIE SCORE WITH DIAMOND NINE

Taking advantage of loose playing by the Diamond team, the Odd Fellows rallied in the closing innings to tie the score and prevent a Diamond victory. Final tabulations were: Odd Fellows, 11; Diamond, 11.

At one time during the tilt, the Diamond team held a 9-2 edge over the Odds but in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings, the Radcliffe street clan registered nine runs and despite the fact that the boys of Joe Diamanti counted twice in the fifth, the Odds made four in their final turn to even it up.

Mostly responsible for the Odds' last inning rally were Jimmy Cooper who rapped out a home run with Berry on base, and Alex Dewsnap who was good for a three-bagger with Watson and Hibbs on base. Dewsnap had three for three in his evening's work.

Charlie Whyno started for Diamond but gave way to Mike DeRisi in the sixth after Cooper's home run. Watson pitched the entire contest for the Odds.

BRISTOL HIGH TEAMS WIN AND LOSE ON FORFEITS

While one Bristol High diamond outfit secured a won on a forfeit, the other gave up a decision by the same token.

Because Newtown desired to get their "series" with Buckingham over early, they forfeited their final tilt scheduled with Bristol to have been played at Newtown last Friday, June 2nd. As a result of the 7-0 win via forfeit, the Cards finished their league season with a record of five victories and three setbacks for a .625 mark to wind up in second place two games behind Newtown for the Lower Division championship.

The girls, on the other hand, gave away a ball game to Langhorne which enabled the "Squaws" to tie Richboro for first place in the softball league, each finishing up the regular season with six on the win side, and one on the red side of the ledger. At the same time it marked the fourth setback in seven games for Bristol which pushed them back into a tie with Buckingham for fourth place in the final standings of the league. Neither Bristol nor Langhorne could get together on a site for their tilt so Bristol forfeited it to Coach Ann Corn's girls.

Langhorne and Richboro will meet in a short series to decide the winners in their league.

Checker Team Wins Opening Game Last Night

Last night on Leedom's Field, the Checker softball team won its opening game by defeating the Mill Street Boys Club by the score of ten to nine. Johnson played a fine game for the "Checks" with Klott Light also pitching a swell game of ball, walking two men with eight hits.

Thomas Proffy pitched good ball for the "Mills." Muffett led in hit with two singles and a double.

The Checker Store team will visit the Auto Boys Thursday night at Leedom's Field.

U. S. Army Begins To Build Up Air Strength

airplane, they could not have divined that their invention, possessed in overwhelming number by one country, in 1939 would bring the world to the brink of a conflict unimaginably more catastrophic than the World War.

Yet that happened. At the historic Munich Conference Chancellor Adolf Hitler, master over an insuperable air force, demanded and received the Sudetenland, on penalty of losing Europe's unprotected capitals a hail of death-dealing aerial bombs.

That challenge—and subsequent challenges by the totalitarian powers—has been accepted by the United States, to assure the safety of the Western Hemisphere.

To meet the challenge, the President, the War Department, and Congress decided this country must possess within two years a force of the flying machines that revolutionized warfare, equal or superior to any in the world. That meant Germany which, according to all available information, has outstripped all nations in air might.

To possess such an air force the United States must, according to military experts, accomplish the following:

- Build 3,000 military airplanes.
- Train 1,000 pilots.
- Teach flying to 20,000 college students annually.
- Train 16,000 mechanics and technicians.
- Establish five new Air Corps bases and enlarge others.
- Greatly expand aeronautical research.
- Build barracks for the augmented air force.

Double the trained factory personnel—now 27,000—in the aircraft manufacturing industry.

Expenditure of $300,000,000 has been authorized by Congress for the job. Because the Administration wants speed, $50,000,000 was made available immediately. The remainder will be held up for some time by an oversight in drafting the re-armorament legislation. Air Corps funds are authorized under a 1926 law which requires an interim of 90 days between the advertising and the opening of bids. The War Department feels legislation is necessary to eliminate this "blind spot." Meanwhile, were it not for the $50,000,000 available, the Army could not have purchased a single airplane before August 1.

Even while the Munich negotiators were "surrendering" to Hitler, President Roosevelt called the country's airplane manufacturers to Washington and laid before them a plan to build 10,000 to 12,000 airplanes in two years.

The manufacturers convinced Mr. Roosevelt of the economic unfeasibility of such a grandiose program. They explained that factory properties would have to be tremendously enlarged to make such a program possible, and would deteriorate rapidly through enforced idleness after the planes were built. They pointed out that such a magnified construction program, carried out in such a short time, would inevitably place in the air hundreds of unsafe airplanes, with resultant heavy loss of life during pilot training. The industry, after a short boom, would quickly sink into a deep depression, from which it might never recover, they said.

Out of those conferences grew the outline which finally was shaped into the plane building program projected currently. And out of this program have developed—and are developing daily—thousands of problems which must be solved.

The task is a colossal one, but the Army, the Industry, the Colleges, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the private flying schools, and all others concerned have "dug in." They all say: "This country shall have the finest air force in the world—in two years."

(The second article in this series will deal with the 3,000 new airplanes to be built for the Air Corps—what kind they are, what they are being made of, how fast they will fly, their armaments, etc.)

dustrial School at Eddington to Bristol without charge.

The names of Harold Hilgendorf, Russell Stackhouse and Fred Hibbs were added to the East Bristol Township Committee.

A committee consisting of Maurice Delker, Robert Cameron and Alfred Wright was named for Newportville. Joseph Kent was appointed on a committee for WPA project at No. 2 fire house.

The report of the display committee was approved and the committee was authorized to enter into a contract before June 15th.

Chairmen of the various committees for the Independence Day celebration for Bristol and the adjacent communities met last night and discussed details in connection with the affair. One of these was a flat denial of a report which has been circulated to the effect that the volunteer solicitors are to receive 10 per cent of the funds which they collect.

It was stated emphatically that all moneys contributed toward the celebration will be used for that purpose and that purpose exclusively. It was emphasized that it is necessary that contributions be made promptly as the committee must sign a contract for the pyrotechnics not later than June 15th.

All the residents of Bristol and vicinity are urged to contribute toward the celebration as it is to a big patriotic event and one which will be open to the public.

It is also urged that those who have made pledges pay such as soon as possible, so that the committee will know definitely just how much money there will be to spend.

Preliminary plans call for a flag raising and speech-making in the morning and a band concert by St. Francis Industrial School band of Eddington. Then in the evening there will be speech-making and the fireworks display and a concert by another band.
